

Jorge Quinones

Jorge Quinones is an experienced electrical engineer with over 20 years of professional practice in Utah. Holding a master's degree, he combines technical expertise with a strong commitment to community service. As a Farmington resident for nearly a decade, Jorge has actively engaged in civic duties and is passionate about supporting local initiatives.

Leveraging his background in communication and marketing, Jorge aims to enhance the dialogue between the city administration and its residents. His goal is to foster clearer, more effective communication channels that strengthen community involvement and ensure that citizens are well-informed and connected with city affairs. This blend of technical knowledge and community focus positions him well to contribute meaningfully to Farmington's public engagement efforts
